听写正文 / QUESTIONS 01–30

P01 What's up, sunshine? I'm Coy Wire. This is CNN 10, your daily 10 minutes of news where I simply tell you the what, letting you decide what to think. Thank you so much for spending part of your day with us.

P02 Let's get smarter. Now, we begin today in the Democratic Republic of Congo, where an Ebola outbreak has crossed a grim [01] _____. It is officially the deadliest Ebola outbreak in the country's history.

P03 More than 2,300 people have died. Nearly 5,000 cases have been confirmed, surpassing the [02] _____ from Congo's devastating 2018 to 2020 outbreak. This outbreak is being driven by the Bundibugyo strain of Ebola, a rare form of the virus which there is no currently approved vaccine or proven treatment for.

P04 Its fatality ratio is nearly one in every two cases. [03] _____ are underway for a strain-specific vaccine, as well as two antiviral therapies. The outbreak was officially declared in May, but officials believe it may have started as early as February.

P05 Ebola spreads through [04] _____ with bodily fluids of infected people, and can cause fever, vomiting, diarrhea, and in severe cases, internal and external bleeding. Much of the outbreak is occurring in areas already dealing with weak health care systems, community resistance, and political instability.

P06 Now to Hawaii, where Hurricane Lala has moved on, but for much of the Big Island, the cleanup is just beginning.

P07 The governor says at least 100 homes have been damaged. Check out this video from the Hawaii National Guard. The [05] _____ of the water at the height of the storm pushed a truck off the road.

P08 Over 30 inches, that's two and a half feet, of rain falling in some areas of the Big Island. But weather [06] _____ are hopeful that the rest of the Atlantic hurricane season, which ends in November, will remain quieter than normal. One reason? Something happening thousands of miles away in the Pacific Ocean, El Nino.

P09 It occurs when waters in the central and eastern tropical Pacific become [07] _____. And while the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, or NOAA, says that there's a strong chance this Super El Nino will become the strongest on record, aka lots of rain, that could mean fewer hurricanes. Our meteorologist Derek Van Dam is here to explain.

P10 Strong El Ninos, like the one that's building right now, have an outsized influence on the Atlantic hurricane season, reducing both the number and the strength of tropical systems. Now El Nino isn't just about the warmer waters here in the Pacific. It's also a change in global [08] _____.

P11 These altered patterns shift sinking air across the tropical Atlantic, stabilizing the atmosphere, reducing thunderstorm development that's needed to create a hurricane. Additionally, these circulation changes, they help displace the [09] _____ across the tropical Atlantic. These strong upper-level winds create wind shear, which is a hostile environment for tropical development and can deliver a death blow to an emerging hurricane.

P12 In the early stages of a tropical storm's life, it needs a calm environment at all levels of the atmosphere to grow. When wind shear is introduced, it disrupts this [10] _____, making it harder for thunderstorms to organize into a tropical system and get stronger. Now think of a hurricane as a spinning top.

P13 Wind shear would be like pushing this top and altering its spin. This is particularly [11] _____ when the top is spinning slowly, just like the early formative stages of a tropical system. With more wind shear around, it's harder for budding hurricanes to get over that hump.

P14 Now while wind shear and sinking air can put a big dent in tropical activity throughout the Atlantic, it doesn't eliminate it altogether. Previous El Nino seasons, like the destruction brought on by Hurricane Andrew in 1992, have proven that it only takes one landfall to make this a [12] _____ season. So be hurricane ready this year by downloading the all-new CNN weather app.

P15 From storms influenced by the ocean to storms literally made by fire, and scientists are calling in a Cold War legend to help understand them. NASA is using a modified version of a U-2 spy plane to study how wildfires help generate storms. The U-2, nicknamed the Dragon Lady, is capable of flying at extreme [13] _____ of up to 80,000 feet, more than twice as high as a typical commercial flight.

P16 It served as a crucial eye in the sky for the United States during the Cold War, and has played a pivotal role in [14] _____ ever since. This version, dubbed the ER-2, is like a flying laboratory. Instead of spying on adversaries, though, it's spying on fire.

P17 Scientists are getting a bird's eye view of pyrocumulonimbus clouds, or fire clouds, as they form. They're some of Earth's least understood weather phenomena. A wildfire can become so hot that it forces massive amounts of heated air, smoke, and [15] _____ upward, and essentially builds its own thunderstorm.

P18 These fire clouds can produce lightning, strong winds, and in some cases, fire tornadoes. Scientists hope that these missions will allow them to better understand and possibly [16] _____ these erratic storms in the future.

P19 Pop quiz hot shot!

P20 What color is a polar bear's skin? White, pink, tan, or black?

P21 If you said black, very good! Polar bears have jet black skin to help them absorb heat from the sun, and while their fur coats appear white, they're actually clear. Their [17] _____ hairs collect and scatter sunlight, making them appear white.

P22 Our next story makes one point perfectly clear. Let sleeping bears lie.

P23 One man learned this the hard way. Disturbing a slumbering polar bear? This happened in Norway's Svalbard archipelago, a [18] _____ of arctic islands roughly halfway between mainland Norway and the North Pole. Last August, a person aboard a vessel reportedly sounded a fog horn near a sleeping polar bear.

P24 Bear wakes up, bear moves away, and on Thursday, human gets billed. Authorities issued a [19] _____ of 50,000 Norwegian kroner, that's roughly 5,300 U.S. dollars, determining the horn was used to deliberately disturb the animal.

P25 Svalbard has strict protections for polar bears, including rules [20] _____ people from unnecessarily disturbing, luring, or pursuing them, and people shouldn't wake them because they need their rest.

P26 They're built to [21] _____ in an environment where their next meal isn't guaranteed.

P27 If we think we've achieved anything on our own, we're foolish. We've all had people help us become who we are. We're nothing more than conduits of knowledge and energy, and what we have is not for us to possess, it's for us to pass on.

P28 Legendary coach Dusty Baker shared that message with my football team, and it stuck with me throughout my NFL playing days. We can gain great [22] _____ learning from our elders, right? Well, that's something that teenager Luke Morrison understood at a young age.

P29 At 13, he took an old camper that his grandfather was ready to throw away and [23] _____ it into a full-on military museum behind his house in Vermont. He collects rare items and stories to share with others. Darren Perrin from our affiliate WCAX has the story.

P30 I've been interested in military history for a while.

P31 Luke's just 15. They could conceal like this.

P32 But knows more about military memorabilia than most people. It started with an [24] _____.

P33 And I saw it as the coolest thing in the world.

P34 But it's grown to include rare finds, some [25] _____, like his grandfather's Air Force uniform.

P35 He served in the States during Vietnam.

P36 Not only collecting military [26] _____, but war stories too.

P37 I'm very grateful towards them and patriotic. I always come away very patriotic and a lot smarter than I was before.

P38 And his collection has grown so much, he's had to expand. Luke just got a second mobile camper to take his museum on the road. It appears Luke is the youngest [27] _____ of a military museum in the country.

P39 I feel like it's extremely important to A, remember history because there's a saying I like, if you don't remember history, you're going to repeat it. And B, we got to remember the [28] _____ of the veterans and who gave us our freedom.

P40 Today's story, getting a 10 out of 10 proves that sometimes your job stinks until you strike gold. A construction crew in Belgium was installing a [29] _____ beneath a former brewery when their drill hit something decidedly not sewage, gold. And not just a little.

P41 We're talking gold bars and coins worth an estimated 9 million Euros. That's about 10 and a half million US bucks. Authorities moved the treasure to a [30] _____ while investigators worked to determine where it came from and who legally owns it.

P42 And my favorite part, one member of the construction crew was a student working a part-time job. That's worth putting on a resume. Teamwork, proficient in Word, and in locating buried treasures.

P43 It is shout out time now. And first in line, all of the access teachers at Klein Cane High School in Spring, Texas. I see you keep inspiring and helping people shine. We so appreciate you.

P44 And this shout out goes to Coach Bilbo and all of my Jaguars at North Pike Junior High in Summit, Mississippi. Rise up.

P45 Thank you for subscribing and commenting on our CNN 10 YouTube channel for your shout out requests. Now, tomorrow is our very first Your Word Wednesday of the new season. Your word in the show.

P46 Put a unique vocabulary word and the definition in the comment section of our latest post on Instagram or TikTok, @CoyWire, @CNN10, and we're going to choose a winner to use in tomorrow's show. Put your school, name, city, and state in there, too, so we can show you some love. Make this a Tuesday terrific, and I'll see you tomorrow, sunshine.

P47 I'm Coy Wire, and we are CNN 10.
