听写正文 / QUESTIONS 01–30

P01 What's up, sunshine? I'm Coy Wire. This is CNN 10, the best 10 minutes in news. Hope you are finding fun ways to spend your summer.

P02 I've just been practicing my ABCs backwards. ZYXWVUTSRQPONMLKJIHGFEDCBA. It's going okay so far.

P03 Today, we have one famous sneaker company lacing up for an AI makeover. And we're going to show you a soccer league proven you don't need superstar salaries to create superstar passion, but first, another nation hits the pause button on social media.

P04 We begin in France, making headlines this week,not just for the Tour de France, but for becoming the first country in the [01] _____ to ban social media for those under the age of 15.

P05 French lawmakers [02] _____ voted Tuesday in favor of the bill, which was championed by President Emmanuel Macron. He will now sign it into law. Macron pushed lawmakers to move quickly so the new rules could be in place before students head back to school.

P06 This September, the new law will be enforced by France's audio, visual and digital communications regulator are calm. The agency says French teenagers spend an average of nearly 90 minutes every day on Tick Tock alone. The ban is expected to apply to major social media [03] _____, although exactly how companies will verify users ages is still being worked out.

P07 Some parents say it's a step in the right direction. Others wonder whether it goes far enough. France isn't alone. Of course, Australia made history last year by banning social media for children under 16. The United Kingdom plans similar restrictions next year, while Spain, Greece and Denmark are exploring [04] _____ of their own.

P08 Next up, imagine your favorite shoe company saying we're done making shoes. Well, if this sounds like it's a setup to a joke, it's not it is real.

P09 Earlier this year, iconic sneaker maker Allbirds stunned customers by announcing it was stepping away from footwear and [05] _____ as an artificial intelligence company called SmartBird. What sounds like an April Fool's prank has become one of the boldest examples yet of businesses betting their futures on AI. Our Claire Duffy spoke to the SmartBird president and CEO about the company's decision to go all in on artificial intelligence.

P10 The company that made these sneakers is dropping Allbirds for AI. News this spring that Allbirds was rebranding as SmartBird sent the company's [06] _____ soaring nearly 600%. But it also left some wondering whether it was a joke or a gimmick. New CEO Nadia Carlsten says she's very serious.

P11 There's a lot backing this up. It's the fact that we have a new company now very much dedicated to AI. We have a board that is [07] _____ and this is something that I have done before. So I know that it's a market that exists and something that we can deliver.

P12 SmartBird wants to provide [08] _____ for companies to run AI systems, a business that is dominated by giants like Amazon, Google and Microsoft.

P13 AI is so hot right now. This is maybe an unusual way to start an AI company. But it wouldn't be unusual for a company that wants to provide value to choose to be an AI.

P14 It's not the first time a struggling legacy company has made a bold bet on a hyped up new technology. And it doesn't always [09] _____.

P15 In 2018, film company Kodak announced it was going all in on blockchain and launching its own [10] _____. While that news initially sent the company's stock up, the effort quickly fizzled.

P16 Last year, Kodak warned investors it was on the verge of [11] _____. But SmartBird's Carlsten says she's confident about the opportunity in AI. As for whether she'll miss the shoes.

P17 I actually never owned an Allbirds shoe. People talk about Allbirds being the preferred shoe brand of tech bros. And of course, I am in this space, but I'm one of the few women in the AI [12] _____ business. So I'm not a tech bro. And I actually tend to prefer high heels myself.

P18 Pop quiz hotshot.Roughly how long does it take sunlight to reach Earth? Eight minutes, 15 minutes, 27 minutes or 43 minutes?

P19 If you said eight minutes, you are sunsational. Even though the sun is about 93 million miles away, it's light reaches us in just eight minutes and 20 seconds. That's less time than this show.

P20 Summer break is here. That might mean more beach trips, more camping trips. And if your parents or anything like mine, they're probably yelling, put your sunscreen on, son. Or maybe trying to get you to wear one of those sun shirts when you're swimming.

P21 So how much does that stuff really work, though? And just how dangerous is the sun that we need to protect ourselves from it? We are going to turn to our very own CNN medical correspondent Meg Terrell for some answers. Meg, just how dangerous is the sun that we need to protect ourselves from it?

P22 Hi, Coy. Well, the main reason is that the sun produces something called UV rays or ultraviolet light. Now, some of it can be good, helping the body produce vitamin D, but too much can damage the [13] _____ and potentially lead to skin cancer.

P23 And we definitely want to avoid that. So what are some of the best ways to protect ourselves from the sun?

P24 Well, covering up, wearing a swim shirt, a hat, sunglasses, and of course, sunscreen. There are a couple of different types, chemical and mineral or [14] _____.

P25 And the main difference is the way they provide protection against the sun. Chemical sunscreens usually contain [15] _____ like avobenzone and octisalate. They work by absorbing the sun's rays and preventing them from damaging the skin.

P26 Mineral or physical sunscreens have ingredients like zinc and titanium dioxide, and they work more like a [16] _____ that reflects UV light off the skin.

P27 The main difference is chemical sunscreens take a few minutes to become [17] _____. So be sure to apply early before going out into the sun.

P28 Either way, you want to make sure you get at least SPF 15 and make sure it's [18] _____. So protecting against both UVA and UVB rays and apply it liberally to any skin that's exposed to the sun. You want to make sure you reapply every two hours that you're outside and after swimming.

P29 And if you're using a [19] _____, make sure it actually goes where you're intending and not off into the wind.

P30 Okay, sunscreen and a hat. Got it. Now, what if it's cloudy? Then do I have to wear it?

P31 Well, a good [20] _____ is to check the UV index for the day. Any day it's three or higher is a day for sun protection.

P32 Meg Terrell, thank you so much. And how fitting is it that we're talking about sun protection because July is UV [21] _____ month. So as you're having fun this summer, take that extra second or two to put on that sunscreen, your future skin will thank you.

P33 The 2026 World Cup is officially in the books.

P34 Congrats once again to Spain for taking home the trophy. But while soccer's biggest stage has gone dark, the beautiful game is still shining in some unexpected places. In China, a league that began in one of the country's poorest provinces has become a national sensation and fans cannot get enough. Our Mike Valerio has more on how one special league is refreshing reminder that sometimes the purest version of sport isn't played under the brightest lights. It's played for [22] _____.

P35 On the pitch in a [23] _____ of northern China, the chanting, dancing and thousands of fans hanging on every shot.

P36 This isn't the World Cup. This is Cun Chao China's amateur village Super League.

P37 Right back, Tong Zihao and his teammates are one win away from Cun Chao glory.

P38 But first, he has teeth to fix. Tong, the dentist becomes Tong, the defender.

P39 You could say it's a dream come true. Standing in the [24] _____ like this, it's not something I normally get the chance to experience.

P40 Like Tong, nearly all the players have [25] _____. Professionals are barred, giving amateurs a stage of their own.

P41 That [26] _____ reverses the top down path Chinese soccer has pursued for years. Beginning in the 2010s, China's property giants spent billions bringing international stars into the professional league. The spending brought a brief burst of success before China's property boom unraveled, along with bribery and match fixing scandals.

P42 All this despite Chinese leader Xi Jinping himself an avid fan, making soccer a [27] _____.

P43 So there are no multimillion dollar [28] _____ here. As soon as all these guys are done work, they pack up their things, drive for hours, put on their cleats and come here because of their love of the game.

P44 While Tong and his team step onto the pitch for the final, the entire [29] _____ gathers at the stadium near festive performances and bustling night markets. But above all, they're here to cheer on their home team. Sun Chao offers what money and mandates struggle to produce, local stars playing for the communities, cheering them on.

P45 Today's story getting a 10 out of 10, a nutty world record that is sure to crack you up. The town of Luverne, Minnesota claims to have more nutcrackers than people, and they've added one giant addition to their roster. The world's tallest nutcracker, Verne the Patriot stands at a jaw dropping 66 feet tall.

P46 That's more than twice the height of the previous record holder in Neuhausen, Germany. And yes, the star spangled superstar has a working jaw. The nutcracker craze was started by 96 year old local legend Betty Mann, who donated her epic collection to the town to help drive [30] _____.

P47 Nutcrackers aren't just a holiday tradition in Luverne. They're a year round celebration. Every summer, the town hosts nutcracker fest proving they're willing to go to great lengths to crack a smile safe to say Betty and company are crushing it.

P48 All right, rise up. We have two shout outs today. This first one goes to Miss Tara at Lakeside International School in Guanacaste, Costa Rica. Thank you for hanging out with us today and pura vida.

P50 Next up we have Mrs. Gee or Miss Gee for Mrs. Great at the Misericordia School in Chicago, Illinois. Thank you for subscribing and commenting on our YouTube channel and making CNN 10 part of your classroom.

P51 Stay cool. Stay curious. Stay kind.

P52 Make someone smile today. Remember you are more powerful than you know. I'm Coy Wire and we are CNN 10.
